I have not played in a place like this for years. What was that? What was I thinking of, coming here? When I was a child, a boy, I went to the schoolyard to play. That was a long time ago. In the American Southwest, previously the Mexican North, Anglo-America ran into Hispanic America. The meeting involved variables of language, religion, race, economy, and politics. The border between Hispanic America and Anglo-America has shifted over time, but one fact has not changed: it is one thing to draw an arbitrary geographical line between two spheres of sovereignty; it is another to persuade people to respect it. Victorious in the Mexican-American War in 1848, the United States took half of Mexico. The resulting division did not ratify any plan of nature. The borderlands were an ecological whole; northeastern Mexican desert blended into southeastern American desert with no prefiguring of nationalism. The one line that nature did provide—the Rio Grande—was a river that ran through but did not really divide continuous terrain.

- ① The borderlands between America and Mexico signify a long history of one sovereignty.

 ③ The Mexican-American War made it possible for people to respect the border.
 ④ The Rio Grande has been thought of as an arbitrary geographical line.

Feelings of pain or pleasure or some quality in between are the bedrock of our minds. But there they are, feelings of myriad emotions and related states, the continuous musical line of our minds, the unstoppable humming of the most universal of melodies that only dies down when we go to sleep, a humming that turns into all-out singing when we are occupied by joy, or a mournful requiem when sorrow takes over.

 ③ Feelings are ubiquitous in our minds.
 ④ Feelings are related to the mental images of objects and events.
