Is breakfast the most important meal? We've all heard that breakfast is the most important meal of the day. While I agree that eating breakfast is a good idea, I actually think _____<sup>(a)</sup>_. It may be a bad idea to miss out on breakfast, but it's also not good for you to skip lunch or dinner. People who skip meals tend to end up snacking more and eating whatever food is available, with little regard for nutrition. The easiest foods to access are often high in sugar and fat, and low in fibre, vitamins and minerals. So, eat your breakfast - but also make sure you have lunch and dinner as well. Meals don't need to be complicated or take hours to cook. However, if you eat good food and don't miss meals, you'll feel better for it.

- ① eating less is better
- ② all the meals are important
- ③ dinner is the most important
- ④ what you eat for breakfast matters

10. Claude Lorraine에 대한 다음 글의 내용과 가장 일치하지 않는 것은?

Claude Lorraine was a French landscape painter and draughtsman. Little is known about his personal life. He went to Rome as a youth, and is thought to have earned his living as a pastry-cook before returning to Paris in 1625. He lived in Rome from 1627, devoted to his work and famous for his picturesque landscape compositions. Claude was a passionate observer of light and atmospheric changes, and he made numerous line and brush drawings of dawn and dusk, working out of doors. He painted many large compositions - Biblical, mythological, religious and pastoral subjects, views of Rome and sea views which have made him famous and influential. Claude was a stimulus and inspiration to the great landscape painters of the 17th-19th, Hubert Robert, Watteau, Wilson and Turner.

The key to a successful franchise, according to many texts on the subject, can be expressed in one word: “_____.” Franchises and chain stores strive to offer exactly the same product or service at numerous locations. Customers are drawn to familiar brands by an instinct to avoid the unknown. A brand offers a feeling of reassurance when its products are always and everywhere the same. “We have found out... that we cannot trust some people who are nonconformists,” declared Ray Kroc, one of the founders of McDonald’s, angered by some of his franchisees. “We will make conformists out of them in a hurry... The organization cannot trust the individual; the individual must trust the organization.”

- ① quality                      ② variety
③ uniformity                ④ creativity

13. FMD에 관한 다음 글의 내용과 가장 일치하지 않는 것은?

Foot and Mouth Disease(FMD) is a highly contagious disease caused by a virus. It is almost exclusive to cattle, sheep, swine, goats, and other *cloven-hoofed animals. Among its symptoms are fever, loss of appetite and weight, and blisters on the tongue, lips, other tissues of the mouth, and the feet. The disease is readily spread by contact; by contaminated food or water; or through the air. Humans, who seldom contract the disease, may be carriers, as may rats, dogs, birds, and wild animals. Complete disposal of infected animals and disinfection of contaminated material are prescribed to limit contagion. No effective treatment exists; vaccines control epidemics but have not eliminated them.

Many species of fishes and birds travel in groups, such as schools of fishes and flocks of birds. These schools and flocks often move very quickly in a highly synchronized fashion. These groups provide protection for individuals in the group. Most predators have to single out and focus on a single individual, in order to successfully capture a prey. Fast-moving and synchronized flocks and schools are believed to make it difficult for predators to accomplish this. In some cases, a group of prey is able to successfully fight off a predatory attack, whereas an individual prey probably would not be able to do this. Although a baboon on its own would probably submit to a predatory attack from a leopard, a group of males in a baboon troop can usually ward off such an attack.

Approximately 7,000 residents live in Copenhagen's city center. On an ordinary weekday evening in the winter season a person walking through the city can enjoy the lights from about 7,000 windows. The proximity to housing and residents plays a key role in the feeling of safety. It is common practice for city planners to mix functions and housing as a crime prevention strategy and thus increase the feeling of safety along the most important streets used by pedestrians and bicyclists. The strategy works well in Copenhagen, where the city center has buildings between five and six stories high, and there is good visual contact between residences and street space. The strategy does not work as well in Sydney. Although the Australian metropolis has 15,000 people living in its heart, the residences are generally from 10 to 50 stories above street level, and no one who lives high up can see what is happening down on the street.

The _____ ㉠ _____ of buildings plays a significant role in preventing crimes, which is due to the _____ ㉡ _____ between residents in the buildings and people on the street.

Twin sirens hide in the sea of history, tempting those seeking to understand and appreciate the past onto the reefs of misunderstanding and misinterpretation. These twin dangers are temporocentrism and ethnocentrism. Temporocentrism is the belief that your times are the best of all possible times. All other times are thus inferior. Ethnocentrism is the belief that your culture is the best of all possible cultures. All other cultures are thus inferior. Temporocentrism and ethnocentrism unite to cause individuals and cultures to judge all other individuals and cultures by the "superior" standards of their current culture. This leads to a total lack of perspective when dealing with past and/or foreign cultures and a resultant misunderstanding and misappreciation of them. Temporocentrism and ethnocentrism tempt moderns into unjustified criticisms of the peoples of the past.

- ① distinct differences in the ways of recording history
- ② beliefs that cause biased interpretations of the past
- ③ historians' efforts to advocate their own culture
- ④ pros and cons of two cross-cultural perspectives

Empathy is a character trait that we value in ourselves and in our friends, colleagues, and the professionals who serve us. The know-how to be empathetic is central to practical wisdom: unless we can understand how others think and feel, it's difficult to know the right thing to do. But empathy has its dark side: too much understanding and sensitivity, too much seeing things from the other's perspective, can _____. Edmund Pellegrino, a scholar of bioethics, explains it like this: "If a physician identifies too closely as co-sufferer with the patient, she loses the objectivity essential to the most precise assessment of what is wrong, of what can be done, and of what should be done to meet those needs. Excessive co-suffering also impedes and may even paralyze the physician into a state of inaction."

- ① block everlasting friendship
- ② justify doctors' abuse of power
- ③ cloud judgment and paralyze choice
- ④ lead to a hasty but correct diagnosis

Many contagious diseases spread through carriers such as birds and mosquitoes. These carriers move with heat and rainfall. With this in mind, researchers have begun to use satellite data to ㉠ [observe / preserve] the environmental conditions that lead to disease. “We could predict conditions that would result in the ㉡ [appearance / disappearance] of cholera, malaria, and even avian flu,” says an expert. The domestic duck, a common bird of Southeast Asia, is one of the main carriers of the H5N1 avian influenza. Scientists use satellite images to map agricultural patterns in the region. These maps show where the number of the ducks is most likely to ㉢ [decrease / increase] and thus where the avian influenza is most likely to spread.
