Many policy-makers claim to support free trade, but at the same time, (A)argue that trade restrictions can be useful when a country bargains with its trading partners. They claim that the threat of a trade restriction can help remove a trade restriction already (B)imposing by a foreign government. The problem with this bargaining strategy is (C)that the threat may not work. If it doesn't work, the country faces a choice between two bad options. It can carry out its threat and implement the trade restriction, (D)which would reduce its own economic welfare. Or it can back down from its threat, which would cause it to lose prestige in international affairs. Faced with this choice, the country would probably wish that it (E)had never made the threat in the first place.

8. 다음 글의 목적으로 가장 적절한 것은?

Dear Principal,

My daughter Mary loves attending your school, and she is doing well in class. However, I can't help but think she could be performing even better. The problem is that Mary is too exhausted after running around at recess to concentrate in her afternoon classes. I realize we have discussed this issue before, but I would just like to repeat my opinion that it would be better to schedule recess before lunch. I think eating later in the day would give students more energy for their afternoon classes. I'm sure that Mary and many other students would benefit greatly from this minor adjustment in the schedule.

Sincerely,
Ann Smith

10. 다음 글의 제목으로 가장 적절한 것은?

According to the new study, laughter truly is contagious. We have known for some time that when we are talking to others, we often mirror their behaviors, copying the words they use and mimicking their gestures. Now we have shown that the same appears to apply to laughter, too. It seems that it is absolutely true that ‘laugh, and the whole world laughs with you.’ Scott and her fellow researchers played a series of sounds to volunteers and measured the responses in their brain with an MRI scanner. All of the sounds triggered responses. The response was much higher for positive sounds, suggesting they are more contagious than negative sounds—which could explain our involuntary smiles when we see people laughing.
