The “Dear jim” letter from IBM Chairman Louis Gerstner to Lotus Development Corp. President Jim P. Manzi was brief, unprecedented – and prtentially momentous. IBM, Gerstner said, planned to acquire Lotus for $3.3 billion in cash, the largest offer ever made for a software company and the first time big blue had mounted a hostile takeover. At $60 a share, nearly double what

Lotus had been selling for, it was a preemptive strike. the stunning thrust signaled that the newly resurgent IBM, which reported record profits in its first quarter this year, was preparing to take on Microsoft, the undisputed leader of personal computer soft ware, in an effort to change the way people use computer. For Gerstner, who has been quietly stabilizing and reorganizing the world’s largest computer company since coming from tobacco and food conglomerate RJR two years ago, it was the first real defending moment of his tenure. His reputation could depend on how well he carries off this daring initia tive.

18.What is the best title of the above passge?

- ① IBM’s triumph over lotus in software sale.
- ② IBM’s record profit in the first quarter.
- ③ The possibility of the merger of IBM and Lotus.
- ④ IBM Chairman’s stunning managerial strategies.

19. What does the underlined Big Blue refer to?

- ① IBM ② Lotus ③ Microsoft ④ RJR

20. Choose the statement which is not true according to the passage.

- ① Microsoft is the number one company in the software industry.
- ② IBM proposed to pay almost double the current price of Lotus stocks.
- ③ Louis Gerstner, IBM Chairman, Transferred to IBM from RJR
- ④ IBM planned to merge Microsoft with a larger offer than that made for Lotus.
