It records several different responses of the body simultaneously as the individual is questioned. That is, a series of different sensors are attached to the body, and as they measure changes in breathing, blood pressure, pulse and perspiration, pens record the data on graph paper. During the test, the operator asks a series of control questions that set the pattern of how an individual responds when giving true and false answers. Then the actual questions are asked, mixed in with filler questions. The examination lasts about 2 hours, and then the expert interprets the data. But it is not always judicially acceptable. Used in police interrogation and investigation since 1924, its use is still controversial among psychologists.① 심전도측정기② 뇌파검사기
