It was the duty of the artists to celebrate the community in its present oneness, in its divine past, and in its glorious future. Thus they invented dances and rituals for the groups, they retold the stories of its gods and heroes, they fashioned their images, and they persuaded the group that they were reenacting the lives of the gods, who would some day return and re-institute the golden age. Thus the artists played a recognized part in the daily life of the people.

A tremendous explosion apparently fueled by a ruptured gas line tore through a San Francisco suburb Thursday night, destroying about 20 homes and critically injuring a number of people, the authorities said. The blast occurred in San Bruno, about 8 miles south of San Francisco, and was so loud and devastating that some officials initially suspect that a plane had smashed into the neighborhood. Towers of flames shot 50 feet into the sky and a plume of ash-colored smoke hovered over the area. Aerial footage showed multiple cars on fire and several homes completely consumed by a blazing fireball that stretched across an entire street. The explosion erupted about 6 p.m. on a hillside near Interstates 280 and 380, in a residential area about two miles west of San Francisco International Airport.

While you'll never be able to anticipate every question you might be asked in an interview, you can get a head start by developing strong, concise answers to commonly used questions. The question, "Tell me about yourself", is often the opening question in an interview. It's also one of the most difficult questions if you're not prepared. Remember, the interviewer does not want to hear about your hometown or your hobby. This question calls for your one-minute commercial that summarizes your years of experience and skills and your personality in the contexts of the job for which you are interviewing. Get to the point and sell your professional self. Develop a few brief sentences that demonstrate you have what it takes to do the job—experience, proven results, and desire to contribute.

Japanese-style conversations develop quite differently from Western-style conversations. And the difference isn't only in the languages. I realized that just as I kept trying to hold Western-style conversations even when I was speaking Japanese. A Western-style conversation between two people is like a game of tennis. If you agree with me, I don't expect you simply to agree and do nothing more. I expect you to add something—a reason for agreeing, another example, or an elaboration to carry the idea further. But I don't expect you always to agree. I am just as happy if you question me, or challenge me, or completely disagree with me. A Japanese-style conversation, however, is like bowling. You wait for your turn. And you always know your place in line. It depends on such things as whether you are older or younger, a close friend or a relative stranger to the previous speaker, in a senior or junior position, and so on.

The color green can have very different meanings. In the past, being green was almost always something negative. For example, if you ride on a boat and feel seasick, your face may look green. Or if you are starting a new job, your boss may say you are green, which means that you don't have any experience. Now, however, green is usually good. Being green more often means doing good things for the environment. People who are good at growing plants have a green thumb. Many companies are going green, which means they are recycling more or are trying to use less energy. In fact, some companies are moving to new, green buildings, which may use solar power or grow plants on their roofs.

In the new millennium, some parents are greatly relieved when their teenage children turn to a new fad, a temporary form of decorating the hands, feet, neck, or legs—Mehndi, a method of painting beautiful designs that last only about three weeks. This ‘new’ fad is actually very ‘old’. For hundreds of years in India, a woman’s friends have painted her to celebrate her wedding day. Another fad from India, however, causes parents more worry—Bidis. Children and young teens are attracted to these thin cigarettes in candy flavors such as orange, chocolate, mango, and raspberry.
