Baseball is one of the most widely watched and played sports in the world, ranking with football(soccer) and basketball in terms of the number of countries in which it is played and the number of people who take part in the game. The game - originally known as "townball" - developed in the early nineteenth century in the northeastern United States. It borrowed from the English games of cricket and rounders, and from children's games such as "one old cat." In the 1840s, Alexander Cartwright standardized the field dimensions in use today. Although improvements have been made to control corruption, numerous opportunities exist for deviant and corrupt practices. The police subculture is a contributing factor to these practices, because officers who often act in a corrupt manner are frequently overlooked, and their behavior condoned by other members of the subculture. One step in the right direction, however, is the monitoring and control of the police and the appropriate use of police style to enforce laws and to provide services to the public.

People entered the city through eight great bronze gates. The most magnificent one was the Ishtar Gate, which was decorated with shiny, patterned bricks and pictures of lions, bulls, and dragons. Babylon's winding, narrow streets were lined with houses. Most had a courtyard with rooms around it. The city walls had gates, around which traders set up markets.
